OPERATION 1325

October 10th, 2022

At first, I was excited to join this project because I had heard a lot about Resolution 1325, but I did not have any information about it. During the early stage of the project, several meetings and sessions about the resolution were conducted, where we discussed its importance and provisions. Then, we moved to have media training sessions to prepare for a TV program that discusses women's issues.

I was delighted during this stage because studying media and journalism has helped me be one of the best trainees during the sessions. And after our complete preparation, our program entitled "Influential Women" was launched, where I was the program's guest in some episodes while I was the presenter in others.

This promoted my skills and refined my abilities, other than the variety of experiences I have gained. I also met many influential female leaders in their communities whom I admire for their hard work in defending and advocating women's rights and active participation in society.

OPERATION 1325

While the project was operating, the local bodies' elections were in their second session, and I was offered to be a candidate on one of the lists. Here, I remembered all the women I met and admired, so I said to myself, it is my turn to make my mark too. So, I went through the electoral process, which was one of the special experiences in my life, which gave me greater motivation to work on increasing the political participation of young people, especially women, because of the importance of their role in society. Because of that, an episode was devoted to my colleague and me to talk about this experience.

After the end of our TV episodes scheduled within the project, we held meetings with female decision-makers and influential women in our areas, which went great in terms of talking about the political situation of women and the difficulties and challenges they face. I learned about many of their success stories, which inspired me to one day become as influential as they are.

Because of the many issues women have, we decided to film and produce videos that carry messages for women and society, and present them to people and see their reactions.

This project is one of the great projects in which I participated and enjoyed working, because of its many benefits in terms of skills and knowledge as well.
